In 1955, Rosa Parks had had enough. She was riding on a public bus in Montgomery Alabama, when the driver ordered her to give up her seat to a White passenger. Parks however, refused and was arrested. She was ordered to pay $14 in fines because she broke the law. African-Americans in Montgomery had also had enough. Led by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the community banded together and staged a powerful boycott that lasted 381 days! A boycott is a form of protest in which a group refuses to use the services of the company or organization that is the subject of the protest. The boycott worked! Not only did the companies that operated the buses lose money, but the United States Supreme Court ruled that Montgomery's bus laws were illegal. Just nine years later, the Civil Rights Act of 1964 was passed making segregation illegal throughout the United States.
